1.1 > Origin of the tournament

The men's Champions Trophy is the brainchild of Air Marshal (retired) Nur Khan, former president of the Pakistan Hockey Federation. During the World Cup tournament in 1978 in Buenos Aires Nur Khan offered the International Hockey Federation (F.I.H.) to stage a "Super World Cup-tournament" in Pakistan in which the best six nations of the world would participate. The selection of the teams had to be based on the most recent World Ranking, according to the Olympic Games and the World Cup.

René Frank of Belgium, former president of the F.I.H., brought the idea of Khan into the F.I.H. Council and the board agreed to the start of the tournament later that year (1978). The Pakistan Hockey Federation, taking the initiative of this Super World Cup-tournament (shortly thereafter the name was changed to Champions Trophy), obtained the right to organise the first edition. Lahore was made the venue of the inaugural tournament, which was held in November 1978.

Pakistan became the winner of the first edition and won a beautiful trophy, made of pure silver and weighing approximately 5 kilograms, a personal donation from Nur Khan. After the last match of that first tournament General Mohammed Zia-ul-Haq, president of Pakistan at that time, declared the next day a general public holiday in Pakistan. The aim of this new yearly competition was (and is) not only to increase contacts between the best countries in the world at the highest level, but also to give a new impulse to hockey's development.
